DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

1. Claims 5-11 are objected to under 37 CFR 1.75(c) as being in improper form because a multiple dependent claim 3-4. See MPEP § 608.01(n). Accordingly, the claims 5-11 have not been further treated on the merits.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Fredley et al. (US Patent 5,847,787) in view of Chen (US Patent 4,516,112).

As to claim 1, Fredley et al. discloses an at least partially transparent polymer dispersed display device comprising at least two electrodes provided with means for applying a voltage thereto (col. 1, line 66 – col. 2, line 4) and spaced from each other by a layer comprising at least one region that optically changes by applying the voltage (col. 2, lines 14-37).

Fredley et al. does not explicitly teach a touch-sensitive switching system where at least one region comprising a piezoelectric material generating a voltage when applying pressure.

Chen teaches a touch-sensitive switching system where at least one region comprising a piezoelectric material (col. 1, lines 64-67) generating a voltage when applying pressure (fig. 3, col. 2, lines 14-26).

Therefore, it is obvious to one skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to incorporate the touch-sensitive switching technique of Chen into the polymer dispersed display device of Fredley et al. to make a touch-sensitive switching system with low power consumption and low manufacturing cost.

As to claim 2, Fredley et al. teaches a polymer dispersed display device wherein at least one of the electrodes is transparent (col. 1, line 66 – col. 2, line 4).

As to claim 3 Chen teaches a touch-sensitive switching system wherein the piezoelectric material is a piezoelectric polymer (col. 1, lines 64-67).

As to claim 4, Fredley et al. discloses a polymer dispersed display device wherein the regions that optically change by applying the voltage are regions comprising a fluid or a dispersion of particles in a fluid (col. 2, lines 14-43).
